ON THE ROCKS.

Passenger and Freight Steamer Driven Ashore.

Eighteen Passengers and a Crew of Fifteen Sailors Left to the Mercy of the Waves.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 11.—In a blinding snow storm and a terrific easterly gale, the passenger and freight steamer F. & P. M. No 3, of the Flint and Pere Marquette line, was driven on the rocky shore of White Fish bay at an early hour this morning, exposed to the full force of the gale and is momentarily swept by seas and spray. The steamer left Ludington, Mich., late yesterday, having a crew of about fifteen men and with a passenger list numbering eighteen persons. The lake was exceedingly rough during the passage, but it was not until the vessel was approaching the Wisconsin shore her situation became alarming. During the night the gale steadily increased in violence and by 3 o'clock the storm was of unusual severity, even for this season of the year. At about 3:30, when the steamer was within twelve or fifteen miles of Milwaukee, she encountered a blizzard. The atmosphere became dense with shifting snow, which being driven by the gale, completely obscured the north point light of Milwaukee bay and that at the Milwaukee pier. In the storm the steamer was carried off her course and in attempting to feel her way into the bay she brought up on the rocks in White Fish bay. The scene of the wreck is about six miles north of Milwaukee harbor. At that point the shore of the lake makes a sweep inland and forms a wide bay, but it is wholly unprotected from a gale from the east. The bottom of the lake is a mass of huge boulders, the shore is steep, and at places a bold bluff rises almost perpendicular from the water's edge. For this reason the efforts at rescue were attended with great difficulty and danger. As soon as the steamer struck the boulders she sounded signals of distress, and word was telephoned to the city. The life saving crew found that it would be impossible to pull the surf boat to the scene of the wreck through the heavy sea, and it was deemed equally impracticable for a tug to attempt to tow the boat to White Fish bay. The surf boat was, therefore, placed on the surf car and the boat was taken overland to the beach, opposite the spot where the disabled steamer lay. Great difficulty was experienced in reaching the beach and when the crew finally arrived on the scene it was found that the high seas and the rocks and boulders that lined the bottom of the bay made it impossible to use the surf boat. Arrangements were at once made to rig the breeches buoy and the throw a line to the wreck by means of the mortar. From the beach the steamer appeared to be in a very bad position, about 800 or 900 feet from the shore and swung stern to the seas, pounding heavily on the rocks and apparently full of water. The passengers took refuge in the cabin and appeared to be in no immediate danger, but this fact did not deter the life savers from hastening the work of rescue.

The surf boat was speedily trundled to the verge of the ice-covered beach and two score of willing hands forced the boat into the waves. The crew pulled against a high gale and big seas, but after a struggle of fifteen minutes the life saver reached the side of the vessel. The passengers and crew remained in the cabin until the surf boat was close to the steamer and then the crowd from the shore could see them assemble around the rail, the men making preparations for leaving the wrecked steamer. A whip was hastily arranged in the gaff of the main mast, and to this a sling was attached. A woman was swung over the rail and carefully lowered and she was soon in the surf boat. The violence of the seas, to which the small boat was fully exposed, made the rescue an exceedingly difficult matter. Again the whip was swung and another woman was lowered over the side and was quickly grasped by the hardy surfmen. Then there was a hasty conference between the life savers and the captain of the steamer. The latter said that the vessel was in no danger of breaking up, and as the gale was moderating, it was decided to wait until later in the day to complete the rescue. At that time it was thought the work would be attended with less difficulty and danger. The surfmen experienced considerable hardship in making a landing. As the boat crushed through the ice and was hauled upon the beach with the women taken from the steamer, one of them sprang to the gunwale of the boat and thence onto the snow covered sand, refusing all offers of assistance. She is Mrs. Augusta Peterson, wife of a surfman of the Ludington, Mich., life saving crew. Her companion was Miss Flora Gunderman, also of Ludington, who was on her way to Chicago. Both women made light of their thrilling experience.

The F. & P. M. No. 3 is one of five steamers owned by the Flint and Pere Marquette railway company, run between Milwaukee and Ludington, Mich. The five boats are named with the initials of the road, and consecutively numbered respectively from one to five. The F. & P. M. No. 3 was the third steamer built for the line. She was considered very strong and sea worthy and especially designed for winter service. The boat was built at Detroit in 1888 by the Detroit Dry Dock company. She was rated A 1 star on the insurance register, and has been valued at $80,000.

SHIVERING HUMANITY

Huddle Like Cattle in the Chicago Public Buildings.

Over 1,000 Men, Out of Work, Money and Friends, Spent Last Night in the City Hall.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—One thousand starving men huddled, shivering in the corridors of the city hall last night while among them moved a college professor and fifteen students making notes and studying social problems with the scientific interest of a vivisectionist. The hundred of men, as they lay on the cold tiled floors or fought for places near the steam heaters were questioned by Professor Hourwich, of the University of Chicago, and his class in statistics. A list of queries has been prepared with a view of developing data regarding the unemployed of Chicago. All those questioned denied being beggars and expressed anxiety to work. The greater number were unmarried. The men said they were able to get no work outside of odd jobs, by which they could earn $1 a week or less.

INDIANA CONGRESSMEN.

Some of Those Who Will be Candidates for Renomination.

Washington, Dec. 11.—It is apparent that nearly all the democratic congressmen from Indiana will be candidates for re-election, with the possible exception of Mr. Bynum. His position is a matter of doubt. He has indicated to a number of persons that he would not be a candidate for renomination, but he has been quick to say that no one has authority to declare him out of the race yet. It is the belief of nearly all the Indiana democrats that he will not be a candidate.

There are indications of sharp rivalry for democratic nominations in several districts which are usually close. In the First district, which is represented by Mr. Taylor, one of the most unobtrusive but useful members in the delegation, a fight is being made by a sprinkling of the local democrats against his renomination. Just what it will amount to remains to be seen. There are usually lively contests in the First district for democratic nominations. One of Mr. Taylor's opponents, his chief opponent, in fact, is Editor Sparks, of the Mt. Vernon Democrat. Mr. Sparks failed to get the appointment as postmaster and has been hopelessly irreconcilable since. Congressman Brots will be a candidate for renomination, but will not have a clear field. W. A. Cullop, of Vincennes, is supposed to be a candidate. Mr. Cullop sought the appointment of district attorney for Indiana, and afterwards wanted to be appointed governor of Utah. Greene county will also probably furnish a candidate, and perhaps Daviess also.

No opposition has yet developed against Mr. Hammond, Mr. Conn, Mr. McNagney or Mr. Martin. From the outlook their friends believe they will be renominated without opposition. Congressman Holman—from whose renomination Editor O'Brien, of the Lawrenceburg register, has been appealing to be delivered—appears to be sanguine. He says he never has fought for renomination, and does not intend to at his age. He will rest his case "in the hands of his friends," meanwhile giving them a quiet tip occasionally on how they can handle it to the best advantage.

Congressman Hammond will probably be a candidate for re-election. The district is very close politically, if not republican. Mr. Hammond's republican opponent promises to be Judge Johnson, of Valparaiso, who was the republican nominee at the last election.

AIMED ESPECIALLY AT O'MALLEY.

Prosecution in the Roby Cases Begun at Crown Point.

Indianapolis, Dec. 11.—Considerable interest is being manifested in the state official circles here over the trial of President O'Malley, of the Columbian Athletic association, and the principals in the recent prize fights at Roby, which begins at Crown Point today. The governor has employed ex-Judge Olds, of the supreme court; Charles F. Griffin, ex-secretary of state, and State Senator Kopelka, to assist Prosecutor McMahan in prosecuting the alleged criminals and he is confidently counting upon the conviction of all the men who stand indicted for the offense. It is no secret here that the state would be satisfied with O'Malley's conviction and punishment, if it could be secured without the conviction of the others.

Hammond, Ind., Dec. 11.—Today the great legal battle against the Roby prize fighters begins in the Lake circuit court at Crown Point. There are four cases each against Martin Costello and Billy Woods and Dominick O'Malley, two against Paddy Smith, three against Solly Smith, and two each against Bobby Burns and Daniel Congdon. A special venire of fifty jurymen and a large number of witnesses have been summoned. The trial will come up before Judge B. M. Langston, of Lafayette. The prosecution will be conducted by Prosecution Attorney Willis C. McMahan, assisted by General Chas. F. Griffin, Judge Olds and Judge B. K. Elliott. The defense has retained Judge Ed Crumpacker, of Valparaiso, and John B. Peterson.

ANARCHIST VAILLANT

Continues to Glory in His Dastardly Deed.

And Only Seems to Regret That His Bomb Was Not More Fatal—He Will be Guillotined.

Paris, Dec. 11.—The excitement caused by the saucepan bomb in the chamber of deputies on Saturday afternoon, has far from subsided, and everybody is looking forward to this day's session of the chamber when most important matters affecting anarchists will, it is expected, be brought forward.

There is no doubt that the general sentiment of all classes, except the socialistic and anarchistic groups, is decidedly in favor of the most energetic measures possible to suppress the constantly increasing boldness and destructiveness of the disciples of anarchy.

It is expected that measures will be introduced providing for the punishment of those who advocate or defend crime in the newspapers and making the unlawful possession of explosives a crime, punishable by severe penalties.

Naturally, the bold and defiant confession made by Vaillant, the bomb thrower, who is still on his bed in the Hotel Dieu surrounded by a guard of detectives, is the main subject of comment this morning. Everybody having the interests of law and order at heart is pleased with the fact that the cowardly miscreant is in the hands of the police, and that he is likely to pay with his life, on the guillotine, the penalty of his crime. Vaillant continues to glory in his dastardly deed, and only seems to regret that he did not succeed in killing or severely wounding M. Casimir-Perier, the premier, and M. Dupuy, the president of the chamber of deputies.

The hardened anarchist still insists that he had no accomplices, and that the branch of anarchism to which he belonged had for a rule that its members should act independently. This, however, is not the belief of the police, and it is understood that they have under surveillance several men suspected of being accomplices to the bomb thrower.

Vaillant, when taken to the hotel Dieu, gave the name of Marchal, as already cabled the Associated Press, and it was only after the detectives worked up his record and that he was subjected to a short, sharp examination by the public prosecutor and examining magistrate that he admitted his name was Vaillant, and that he was the man who threw the bomb which wounded so many people on Saturday.

Marchal, it was also shown, was the name of Vaillant's mistress, the anarchist having deserted his wife in America. He took the name of Marchal, it has also been shown, mainly to disguise himself, and on account of the fact that he was living with a married woman named Marchal after stealing her from her husband. Marchal, the husband of Vaillant's mistress, in an interview today, said that Vaillant returned from America in January last and became a boarder in the Marchal household. Eventually Vaillant succeeded in seducing Madame Marchal, induced her to sell and pledge the furniture belonging to her husband, and, after he had finally succeeded in bringing about a complete rupture between husband and wife, he made the woman work from morning till night, in order to supply his wants, and abused her in the most terrible manner when she was unable to supply him with money.

The police, it was announced this morning, during the investigation made into the explosion of Saturday searched the apartments of a man named Cohen a Dutch anarchist, and there found a number of copper tubes, which, it is said, were to be used in the manufacture of explosive bombs. In Cohen's apartments, it is added, the police also seized a bundle of documents of the utmost importance, as well as nearly one thousand letters from anarchists in all parts of Germany which, it is said, will enable the French police to place the German authorities in possession of a list of all interested in anarch in Germany. Deputy DeM. Jean, who is known to be an extreme socialist, has written a letter, which is published in the Matin this morning, excusing Vaillant for his crime.

DEMANDS RECOGNITION.

But Her Husband Has Formed a New Alliance and Refuses.

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 11.—Mrs. Fred Heitz, of Indianapolis, is here demanding recognition by the city editor of the Journal (German) as his wife, which he refuses. Mrs. Heitz has letters of indorsement from Judge McBride, of the supreme court; Father Scheideler, of St. Mary's church, and many others of standing in Indianapolis and Fort Wayne. Heitz is living with an attractive young woman, known in Indianapolis as Marie Valerino, who he says is his wife. The first Mrs. Heitz claims that Heitz denies the marriage on the ground that, she being divorced from her first husband, Kuhn, of Fort Wayne, the Catholic church would not recognize a second marriage. Father Dowling, of St. Bridget's church, Chicago, fully investigated the case, Mrs. Heitz says, and performed the ceremony. She says that since their marriage, September 25, 1890, she has given Heitz $5,000, which she had made in the millinery business in Indianapolis.

Lawyer Accused of Embezzlement.

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 11.—Judge Taylor, of the circuit court, has appointed a bar committee to investigate a charge of embezzlement which has been preferred against Frank McKinney, a young lawyer. A colored woman alleges that McKinney embezzled $60 of her pension money.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS.

Congressman Cobb Speaks His Mind on State Banks.

As a Democrat He Favors Repeal of the Tax, But Demands a Safeguard Around the Issue of Paper.

Washington, Dec. 11.—Representative Seth W. Cobb, of Missouri, a democratic member of the house committee on banking and currency, is in favor of the repeal of the 10 per cent. tax on state banks, but is not in favor of having the statutes repealed unconditionally.

So close does the committee stand on this question that the vote of each member is considerable of a factor. With the six republicans of the committee there are two democrats, Chairman Springer and Representative Sperry, of Connecticut, who are against reporting any bill, and Representative Johnson, of Ohio, who will vote to report the bill, but who will oppose it on the floor of the house. This barely gives the repealers a majority in the committee and any one of this majority is enabled to dictate terms.

Mr. Cobb, of Missouri, has some suggestions which he will insist upon before he consents to vote in favor of any bill which the majority may formulate. They include safeguards which, he thinks, will prevent a return to wildcat money. "As a democrat," said he, "I am in favor of the repeal of the 10 per cent tax. It is a principle of democracy that the government has not the power to use the taxing power for any other purpose except to raise revenue, and it would be a good thing if we would stick close to the idea that taxes should not be laid upon anything to build up or to tear down any business or industry. But in repealing the 10 per cent. tax on bank circulation it is the duty of congress to see that the circulation is not allowed to become debased; that every note must be protected and the holder secured, whether the paper is issued in Missouri or New York."

Mr. Cobb thought it not improbable that there might be two or three reports from the committee and that possibly a bill would be reported back without recommendation, and minority reports representing different views of the members at the same time. There are several members of the committee who are willing to get almost any kind of a report into the house trusting to sufficient support to amend the bill to make the repeal unconditional upon a final vote.

While not making the charges in so many words some of the republican senators intimate strongly that the report made by the senate judiciary committee upon Senator Hill's bill for the repeal of the federal election laws was secured by methods not entirely to their liking. Senator Hoar, who is a member of both the committees on the judiciary and privileges and elections and who, under the republican regime, was chairman first of the elections committee and then of the judiciary, contends that the bill should have been referred originally to the first named committee, and failing primarily to secure that reference should have it now despite the report of the judiciary committee.

When the morning hour arrived Mr. Kilgore, of Texas, was about to call up the bill for the admission of Utah when Mr. Dingley, on behalf of the republicans, made a statement declaring that the bill was of too much importance to be considered during the morning hours but no objection would be made from him if time were allowed for debate and argument. Thereupon General Wheeler asked unanimous consent that Tuesday and Wednesday after the morning hour be set aside for its consideration. Without objection this order was made. It is understood that a delegation of republicans from Utah are instrumental in inducing the republican leaders to recede from their opposition to the bill.

The ways and means committee have changed the time when the tariff bill will go into effect from March 1 to June 1, 1894.

TWO ASSAULTS.

A Prominent Attorney Attacked by Toughs.

Superintendent McFarlin Found in a Dying Condition in His Front Yard—Two Suspects Arrested.

Akron, Ohio, Dec. 11.—John McFarlin, superintendent of the Akron street railway, was mysteriously assaulted last night. He was found in his own front yard, unconscious and with a fractured skull and a deep cut in his neck. He is still unconscious and cannot live through the day. James McFeely and Abe Williams, two well known tough characters, were seen with him early in the evening and are under arrest for being connected with the affair.

Ironwood, Mich., Dec. 11.—An unknown assailant made a murderous attack upon Attorney Thomas Kissane Saturday evening, and he is not expected to live. Mr. Kissane represents the water works company, owned principally by New Yorkers, and has recently been engaged in a rather stormy litigation. The attack is believed to have been made on account of this legal contest.

The candies made by Shelby & Co., 96 Calhoun street, are equal to the best.

LABOR HOLDS COUNCIL.

Thirteenth Annual Convention of the Federation of Labor.

Gompers' Succession Will be Contested—The Big Parade Abandoned.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—The thirteenth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor opened in the city council chamber today. Over ninety delegates from all parts of the country were present when President Samuel Gompers called the convention to order.

There was apparent a feeling among the western delegates that the honor of the presidency of the organization, which has remained in the east for several years, should be conferred on a western leader, and gossip was current in the convention hall as to a strong fight at the time of the election of officers. A delegate high in the order admitted that there was considerable dissatisfaction among the western unions.

A parade had been planned for this morning, but because of bad weather the idea was abandoned and the delegates marched from their headquarters to the council chamber without display.

Samuel P. Gompers has been eleven times elected president of the federation, but his supremacy is now threatened, and he may be supplanted by a western rival in the coming election.

If Gompers retires from the position he has filled so long it will not be under any cloud or in the face of any serious charges, but rather on the grounds of expediency. There is a growing sentiment that the west should be recognized, and Chicago will present a candidate in the person of T. H. Griffith, the stalwart and good looking president of the Horseshoers' union. The fight will be a pretty one and unless all signs fail will be devoid of personalities and ill feeling.

Governor Altgeld, democrat, and Acting Mayor Swift, republican, had been invited to speak at the opening session, but at the eleventh hour they were informed that they would not be permitted to address delegates. The reason given for this action was a provision in the federation's constitution prohibiting addresses by men holding public positions, but P. J. Maas, secretary of the Chicago arrangements committee intimated that the affair had grown out of the fight on President Gompers. Governor Altgeld was not informed that his presence was not desired, until just before the convention was called to order.

DIVORCE DAY.

Two Divorces Asked for and One Granted.

Frank Shaw Sent to the Penitentiary for One Year—Other Court News.

Breen and Morris, as attorneys for Anna Wertz, have commenced suit in the superior court asking that their client may be divorced from her husband, Henry Wertz, and given $1,000 alimony. The petition alleges that the two were married on the 3d of January, 1874, and now have two grown up children. During the last several years the plaintiff says that the defendant has become an habitual drunkard and fails to provide a support for the family. She also says that he is guilty of abuse and gross neglect of duty, and for that reason she has not lived with him since last October.

John F. Rodabaugh has begun suit in the superior court for his client, John W. Moore, asking that his client might be divorced from Ellen Moore, his wife. Mr. Rodabaugh has taken the petition from the files and the reporters cannot mention the causes alleged.

In the circuit court this morning Lena M. Goldthait was given a divorce from her husband, Howard Goldthait. E. W. Harris was the attorney for the plaintiff.

In the circuit court this morning Jesse York was sent to jail for sixty days for burglary. Frank Shaw, who stole an overcoat at the Wayne hotel, was sent to the penitentiary for one year.

Assault and battery cases against Frank and Samuel Sapp and Ralph Gunther are on trial before Justice Wilkinson.

In the superior court, the bank of Randolph obtained a judgment of $200 against the Western Fruit company.

Robert Beuchel and Minnie Wiehe have been given a license to marry.

The county commissioners are hearing remonstrances against granting Frye, of Maples, a license to sell liquor.

THE COUGHLIN TRIAL

Begins Its Sixth Week and Will Continue Eight Weeks More.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—The sixth week of the Coughlin trial opened today with the taking of testimony by the prosecution. It is expected that eight weeks more will be consumed in the trial of the case, as the state and defense will, it is said, introduce about 100 witnesses each. Immediately upon the opening of court the following witnesses were called by the state and sworn: Officer Philips, Henry Fosch, John Finegan, Captain Villiere, Patrick McGarry, James F. Boland, Frank Scanlan, Stephen Congelly, William Mickell, D. P. Ahrens, Andrew Lewis and Henry Wischund. Captain Frances Villers first took the stand.

Yesterday, while skating on the Maumee river, at the foot of Francis street, the young son of Aug. Huxall, fell into the water and was badly scared.

ANOTHER ROBBERY.

A Texas Pacific Train Held Up Last Night.

The Engineer Shot in the Shoulder and the Express Car and Passengers Robbed.

Austin, Texas, Dec. 11.—The cannon ball train, No. 2, on the Texas Pacific railroad, was robbed by six men at Duvall last midnight. The express safe was looted of its contents and the passengers robbed of their money and other valuables.

It is not known what the express company's loss is. The train was stopped by the turning of a switch by the robbers and the engineer, not obeying orders with the alacrity required, was shot in the shoulder.

POSTMASTER HELD UP.

Former Fort Wayne Citizen Tackled by Toughs.

They Rob Him of $500 in Cash and Make Good Their Escape—Said to be Captured.

Postmaster H. M. Bicknell, of Garrett, formerly of this city, where his mother kept a boarding house at the corner of Clinton and Wayne streets, was Saturday night held up and robbed at Garrett.

Bicknell and wife had just closed the office and proceeded on their way home, a few blocks away, when four burly robbers sprang upon them. One of the gang struck Mr. Bicknell several blows on the head with a revolver, cutting his head and knocking him down, while two seized Mrs. Bicknell, throwing her to the ground and forcing a cloth into her mouth, while the third man grabbed a tin box which Mr. Bicknell usually carried.

It contained $300 in cash and stamps and a number of money order blanks and other valuable papers. All made their escape.

At 3 o'clock this morning word reached this city from Laporte to the effect that three of the men had been captured at that place after a hard fight. They protest their innocence, but tally exactly with the description of the men given by Mrs. Bicknell.

MELLO'S SHIPS

Make Things Lively About Rio Harbor.

Washington, Dec. 11.—The navy department on Sunday received the following dispatch from Commander Pickings at Rio: "The Brazilian government has requested consuls to warn vessels to move from the present anchorages and has drawn a line inside of which it is dangerous to venture. This prevents the discharge of cargoes at wharves." This is interpreted to mean that the anchorage and the wharves have come within the line of fire of the forts and Mello's ships and it is not safe to come within that line.

COMEDIANS FIGHT.

Actor Leaves the Stage to Join In and a Lively Battle Ensues.

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 11.—Comedians Curran and Graham, of "The Dazzler" company, got into a lively fight behind the scenes Saturday night and pommeled each other at a lively rate, Curran having accused Graham of skipping his lines. Annie Lewis and the other members of the company screamed, and Joe Ott cut his part and hastily left the stage to help the others suppress the hostilities. The audience didn't know until today what had occurred.

San Francisco, Dec. 11—The United States steamer Mohican came off the Mare Island dry dock Saturday night and will begin coaling today. The vessel is under orders to be ready for sea on the 16th inst. Her destination is Honolulu. It is believed she is to relieve the Philadelphia, now at Honolulu.

LOCAL LINES.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Louis Niemeyer, a ten pound boy.

Mrs. Dr. Kessler and two children are seriously ill with dyphtheria.

The police were last night notified to look out for one Zella Lyttle, supposed to be in this city.

Thomas Tiernan, of 73 Madison street, is dangerously ill. He is threatened with pneumonia.

At noon today a traveling man had a valuable grip stolen from in front of the Friends' Enterprise clothing house.

The great World's Fair at the Y. M. C. A. opens tomorrow night, and those who never saw the World's Fair now have an opportunity to do so.

The story of Allen county farmers being swindled by bogus telegrams, as published in some of the papers, is said to be a rank fake. The story was stolen from a country exchange.

John Johnson, vice-president and chairman of the executive committee of the Borton club, has called a special meeting of the club for tomorrow night at the club rooms in Room No. 21, in the Arcade building. All members are urged to attend, as business of importance will be transacted.

William H. Quinn, chief deputy coroner of Chicago, spent Sunday with his parents on West DeWald street. Mr. Quinn showed his host of friends here a magnificent diamond studded star which was recently presented to him by his associates in the office, the cost of which was $500. Mr. Quinn is a cousin of Officer Quinn, of this city.

WIDE OPEN SALOONS.

The Sunday and Eleven O'clock Order Loses Its Force.

Chief Wilkinson Refuses to be Interviewed—Gamblers Said to be Flocking Back to the City.

It has been known to The Sentinel since last Monday morning that the recent Sunday closing and 11 o'clock saloon order had lost its force and that the last arrest, for the time being, had been made.

A week ago yesterday three saloon keepers were arrested for violating the law. One, in the very heart of the city, had kept his place of business open and was entertaining a number of so called "friends." A policeman, in passing, heard the noises and notifying the Lieutenant the latter called at the saloon and as a result, an affidavit was the next day made out charging the aforesaid saloonkeeper with Sunday desecration. This affidavit was sworn to by the policeman on the beat. On the same Sunday two other saloon-keepers were found violating the law and affidavits were likewise made against them by the prosecuting attorney. Warrants for the arrest of the violators were not issued on Monday, however, and this was delayed on one pretext and another until Wednesday morning, when two of the saloon men were brought into court. One of them being inexperienced plead guilty to the charge of Sabbath desecration and was fined a nominal sum. Not so with the other. He swore that he was in the saloon with a crowd of friends playing pedro. The lieutenant, who had caused the arrest, testified that the saloon was exceedingly noisy upon Sunday and he had placed the proprietor under arrest because he was violating the law, but, notwithstanding, the saloon man plead "not guilty" and was let go. The third violator was brought into the court in the afternoon and likewise let go upon pleading not guilty. The spasmodic streak of morality had passed and Fort Wayne was again a wide open town.

From last Wednesday until the present time the saloons have been violating the law and yesterday a drink could be easily gotten in any one of a half hundred saloons. Last evening, at 9 o'clock, a reporter counted no less than twelve saloons doing business in the heart of the city.

While no specific order has been given to the city police not to arrest saloon men found violating the law, yet it is understood that saloons doing business on the quiet are to be allowed to continue.

No order from the chief of police was necessary, however, as the example by the mayor in allowing the violators of the law to go free upon the grounds of "insufficiency of evidence" was sufficient. The evidence in the second batch of cases was parallel to that given when the first batch of arrests were made and fines assessed.

GAMBLERS COMING HERE.

Now that the saloons are wide open the festive gambler is coming back to town to add to the general misery of the situation. When the gambling houses were closed recently the paraphernalia and gambling devices were allowed to stand unmolested. Consequently the little ivory ball will soon go spinning about the roulette wheel and "suckers" will try to catch the 00; and there will be a general jingle of faro and poker chips in the old dens where the wives and children of misguided men have been caused suffering untold.

REFUSED TO ANSWER.

Chief of Police Wilkinson was interviewed by a Sentinel representative, who gave him the following six questions to answer:

"Have you given any specific order to your men to allow saloons to remain open on Sundays and after 11 o'clock p. m.?"

Refused to answer.

"Has the impression (directly or indirectly) been given the policemen through you or any other city officer, that they are to be less vigilant in arresting saloonkeepers found violating the Sunday or 11 o'clock law?"

Refused to answer.

"Were any saloons open today (Sunday) to your own knowledge?"

Refused to answer.

"Have any saloons been reported open today or this (Sunday) evening by day or night policemen?"

Refused to answer.

"If open, why were no arrests made?"

Refused to answer.

"Do you know of any conference having occurred recently between an organization known as the Liquor Dealers' League or association and city officials regarding the recent Sunday closing and 11 o'clock order?"

Refused to answer.

In a general way, however, the chief replied as follows:

"With regard to this saloon closing question I will say that whatever orders I receive I give to my men as I get them from others in authority."

Three Drowned.

Seattle, Wash., Dec. 11.—James Elam, Emmett Barkee and Joseph Wernett, young men from this city, were drowned in Lake Union last night by the capsizing of a small boat. A party of four were out duck shooting in the boat when the wind came up and capsized the boat.

TOOK MORPHINE.

Frederick C. Knock Dies From Effects of Poison.

He Was the Father of Police Officer Knock and Was Well Known Over the City.

Frederick C. Knock, aged 65, took a dose of morphine, Saturday morning, with suicidal intent and died at 11:30 o'clock yesterday morning at his home, No. 30 Elm street, Nebraska.

His son, Charles, had been out to a party on Friday night and returned home about 1 o'clock. He found his father sitting up by the stove reading. When asked why he did not go to bed the old gentleman replied that he would go presently. An hour or so later Mrs. Knock was awakened by unusual noises and going to her husband's bedside found him in great pain and suffering from the effects of some drug. She at once aroused the family and sent for a physician. Dr. George B. Stemen, of Nebraska, went to the house and pronounced the case a hopeless one. Previous to having become unconscious, Mr. Knock stated that he had taken poison, but assigned no reason. Later Dr. Rosenthal was called, but he could do nothing. The deceased was the father of Police Officer Knock, who said yesterday there was undoubtedly some motive for the suicide, but what it was the family could not divine. The old gentleman was somewhat depressed in spirits by reason of being out of work. He recently built a new house and had a payment of $500 to make on it, but the debt was not pressing and the family was not in straightened circumstances, owning another property in which they lived. He was positive in anything that there had never been any domestic disturbance.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the late residence, Rev. Dr. Schaaf officiating.

DR. SCHAAF RESIGNS.

After Nearly Twenty Years of Active Pastoral Labors.

He Announced His Resignation From St. John's German Reformed Church—Brief Sketch.

The many friends of Rev. Carl Schaaf, D. D., were somewhat surprised to learn yesterday that after nearly twenty years ministerial labor in this city as pastor of St. John's German Reformed church, he had resigned and would probably leave the city for work in other fields.

Such, however, proved to be the fact and the announcement was made from the pulpit yesterday at the morning service.

The circumstances which led to Dr. Schaaf taking this step in no way concern the public, but the fact is to be regretted that so able a man has resigned from the Fort Wayne ministry.

Dr. Schaaf is a graduate of the Heidelberg college, of Tiffin, O., and also of the theological seminary, located at the same place, and several years ago the institution conferred upon him the title of Doctor of Divinity, which, on account of his learning, he is deservedly entitled to.

He is a man of many scholarly attainments, well versed in all the affairs of church, had a wide acquaintance throughout this part of the state, was universally loved by the people of his congregation and esteemed by our citizens generally. All will regret his determination to leave the city to engage in ministerial labors elsewhere.

He has been eminently successful in his church work here, and has made the congregation of which he was pastor one of the largest and most successful in the city.

Afraid to Do Their Duty.

The action of the city authorities in regard to the enforcement of the Sunday-closing saloon law and the 11 o'clock law is about as much of a farce as it can well be, and it is evident from the dodging tactics of the officials and their palpable failure to do their duty in this respect that they have no desire to execute the laws.

Fort Wayne has had spasmodic enforcements of the saloon closing law. It was done under Mayor Harding, and it was done at different times under Mayor Zollinger's administration, but in each instance they only lasted for a brief season, and then affairs drifted back into the old channel again and the saloons were allowed to do as they pleased.

These brief seasons of law enforcement, however, proved that the officers can compel the saloon men to comply with the laws, and the very fact that the officials do not continue this policy looks as if they were in sympathy with this class of law violators and do not intend to compel them to live up to the statutes and ordinances as other people are required to do. If this is not the case why do they not do their duty, as by their oaths of office, they are compelled to do?

One pretext or another is urged as a reason for their dereliction of duty, but behind them all stands the plain words of cowardice. They know their duty but are afraid to do it. What they should do, under the present circumstances, when they acknowledge that they are unable to enforce the laws, is for them to resign and let their places be filled by men who will do their duty. We have such men in Fort Wayne. Indianapolis officials have no trouble in enforcing the law, and if our officers were firm and desired to do their duty in this respect they could do so.

Judging from the number of prominent democrats who have spoken to The Sentinel on this subject, the party is sick and tired of this kind of evasion of duty and "boys play" which has been indulged in by our officials for so many years. The people want a change, and if they cannot secure men in the democratic party who will do their duty, who can blame them for going elsewhere? The day has gone by when people think more of their party than they do of their homes and firesides. At the coming spring election the test of fitness must be men and not party. No one loves the true and honest principles of the democratic party more than The Sentinel, but when they put men in office year after year who simply wink at the violation of laws and pay no attention to the demands for their enforcement, it is time for honest men in all parties to step to the front and insist that true and brave men be chosen to manage the affairs of our city. The people are aroused on this subject as they have never been before, and their voice will be heard at the polls in the coming spring election.

An Elkhart man recalls the fact that on December 3, 1871, the snow lay nineteen inches deep on the level. The winter of 1871-2 was a long and severe one.

Tariff reform appears to have been sufficiently discussed heretofore before the people. The people plainly instructed as to what they want in this respect. Let congress act and waste no time in talk.

The wise men and women, the enterprising men and women, the men and women who get the most and the best for their money, read advertisements. At no time do they read them more carefully than at this time as the holidays come rapidly on.

Indiana distillers and tobacco and cigar manufacturers and dealers, paid an internal revenue tax the last fiscal year, ending June 30th last, to the amount of nearly six and one half million dollars. There is an even dozen grain and thirty-seven fruit distilleries in the state. The grain distilleries used 136,254 bushels of malt, 81 bushels wheat, 50,190 bushels rye and 1,191,946 bushels corn. The cigar factories made 75,003,910 cigars and 320,000 cigarettes.

A St. Louis newspaper objects to the word "hello" or "halloo," and claims that a man does nothing of the kind but merely "hollers." It adds: "Why not admit 'holler' to the vocabulary?" The Century dictionary has admitted it with a slight apology. The word "holla" is given without apology, and that is the right word after all. A man doesn't "holler;" he "hollas," unless he happens to live in a small New England settlement where the "r" is a very much overworked letter.

The Hazen Balloon.

We have heard nothing lately from Professor Hazen's balloon, which it was to cross the Atlantic ocean. Professor Hazen felt certain some time ago that he could do this, but perhaps his apparatus is not ready yet. He clings to the old fashioned balloon, inflated with hydrogen, though the windbag he proposes to use will be of goldbeaters' skin instead of oiled silk. Goldbeaters' skin is made from one part of the intestines of beef cattle and is extremely thin and light. Its advantage over oiled silk is that it will not let the hydrogen leak out so much.

The bag Professor Hazen proposes to use contains 100,000 cubic feet of hydrogen. He counted that it would last 20 days, and by that time he and his balloon would certainly be landed somewhere, if not in the next world.

The balloon will be driven and steered by ordinary propeller and rudder, worked by the aeronauts themselves. When the wind is blowing from east to west, Professor Hazen will descend as close as possible to the sea and let down a small pail, dip it full of water and draw it up again. He will repeat this operation till he has enough sea water to fill a large pail. Then he will let down the large pail by a strong rope, and it will form a sort of drag net to keep the balloon from being forced rapidly in the wrong direction. The prevailing winds on the Atlantic ocean, however, blow from west to east. To take advantage of these, which sometimes blow from 50 to 100 miles an hour at high altitudes, the professor will make his balloon ascend to a height of two miles or thereabouts and travel at that height. But it will be awfully cold up there.

The Tramp Must Go.

The cup of iniquities of the tramp is full. He has developed from the shiftless, lazy, but comparatively harmless deadbeat and beggar to the full fledged, fierce and desperate robber and murderer. The plot some of his tribe formed to wreck and rob the New York express on the Lake Shore road is so fiendish in its character that it is enough to make public opinion rise in indignation and do away summarily with every tramp in America.

Eight burly, well fed tramps sneaked under the cars and upon the trucks of a freight train at Elkhart, Ind. A mile out from that town they attacked the trainmen and tried to disconnect the last 10 cars of the train. This was not for the purpose of robbing the freight cars. Nothing so mild and gentle as that suited these gentlemen of leisure. Their design was to disconnect the freight cars and leave them stand upon the track so that the fast New York express, loaded with passengers, would run into them, be wrecked completely, and then the tramps could rob the express car and the dead and dying passengers.

Fortunately the heroic men who had charge of the freight train pulled themselves together and resisted. There was a desperate fight for nine miles; then the train reached Goshen and safety. Only two of the villains who had tried to execute the devilish plot were captured at that time. This ever increasing army of ruffians has been fed and clothed by the American people now for 25 years. Shall the thing go on?

Missed His Opportunity.

It is often remarked that there are many persons who go about hoping that they will meet with some mishap in order that they may present a claim against a corporation for damages. The other afternoon a young man who was riding on the rear platform of a street car accidentally stood with one foot on a steel bolt while the loose end of the wire that connects the light wire in the motor with the same kind of a wire in the trailer touched the side of his neck. The electric shock stunned him for an instant. He fell to the floor of the platform, but immediately got up again all right.

"Are you hurt?" asked the conductor.

"No, not a bit," said the young man.

The conductor took his name and wrote down the answer he had made. "Now, if I had only had sense enough not to have got up and to have quivered like a man badly hurt, I might have had them up at my house settling with me for $500 cash within three hours," said the young man after he had got off the car. "It is what a fellow gets for not thinking before he speaks."—Indianapolis News.

Fate seems determined to agitate the gentle Philadelphia breast. Awhile ago it was colored policemen that disturbed the Quaker serenity; now it is garbage. It seems that a number of truck farmers bought the city garbage for alleged fertilizing purposes and then left it to lie in heaps of un-Philadelphialike slovenliness and become a stench and a reproach to the community. The city authorities now have in view two ways of disposing of the refuse. One is just plain burning, without any design looking toward making it useful. The other is to sell it to cow keepers, but be sure that it is conveyed out of the city. Other cities will look with interest on the progress of the Philadelphia garbage war.

New England, Canada and a considerable portion of New York state have found out that it is quite possible for an earthquake to occur in their respective localities. It was not a serious earthquake, but then it might have been as easily as not. Perhaps it was only a foretaste of that tremendous convulsion which Dr. Joseph Rodes Buchanan vows by the eternal is going to happen sometime in the next 10 years and sink part of New York and all of Jersey City under the sea. The helpless inhabitants of those wicked towns have therefore plenty of warning.

It is a cheerful and satisfactory sign of the progress of civilization that more than 50 arrests of college students were made in New York city Thanksgiving evening, and that an army of half drunken hoodlums and rowdies were prevented from "taking the town," as they call it, by the intervention of good strong husky, wholesome policemen. The ruffianism that occasionally characterizes college students, particularly after a Thanksgiving football game, is an outrage on the community and a shame for the schools the boys attend.

There is an estimated deficiency of nearly $9,000,000 in the United States mail department this year. It is partly because the mails carried 85,000,000 pounds of free matter. No wonder it was heavy. A considerable amount of it was speeches.

IN RECEIVER'S HANDS.

The Aultman Company Crowded for Cash.

Assets Placed at $2,700,000 and Liabilities at $1,600,000—Cause, the Tightness of Money.

CANTON, Ohio, Dec. 11.—The business of C. Aultman & Co., manufacturers of engines, threshers and other farming implements, has gone into the hands of receivers, Wm. A. Lynch and Robert A. Miller being appointed. The company, it is understood, is entirely solvent, as its assets are not far from $2,700,000, while its liabilities are about $1,600,000. The application for a receiver was made by Hon. Lewis Miller, of Akron, the president of the company. The tightness of the money market is supposed to be accountable for it all.

GAMBLING HOUSE RAIDED.

Mayor Major Leads the Officers and Breaks Down the Doors.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Dec. 11.—Mayor Guy G. Major late Saturday night led a raid upon the most fashionable gambling house in town, over Wallace's resort. He called at the police station and took two detectives, one sergeant and two patrolmen and led the way to the den. With his own hands the mayor broke down the doors and ordered the crowd inside to surrender. The mayor found some of the men who had been instrumental in his election and also several prominent citizens. All were bundled into patrol wagons and hurried to the station. Fictitious names were given by all and the keeper, Samuel Small, put up bail for the entire party. The roulette table, wheels of various kinds, poker chips and other devices were taken to the station. They will be burned. About a dozen persons are said to have escaped on to the roof of the building. Fifteen prisoners were taken. No other gambling houses were disturbed. The affair is the sensation of the hour, the mayor receiving alternate praise and condemnation. His enemies insist his object was to punish persons against whom he was piqued and of whose presence in the place he had received information.

DRESS ON THE STAGE.

HARRIET VERNON ON FOOTLIGHT COSTUMES.

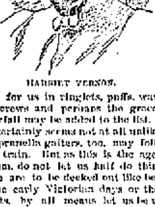
Realism Is Playing Sad Havoc With the Women of Thespis—Prunella Gaiters and Antiquated Ringlets and Skirts—New and Beautiful Costumes.

THE DECADE when Eugenie was Empress of France all the feminine world turned its eyes to her for its clothes. Now the stage plays the role of fashion dictator, first the stage of London and Paris, and later that of New York.

It has been a long time since it has given us such a profusion of ideas for our beautification, and if we are to believe the plaints of dressmakers these ideas are coming "when the need is the sorest," and therefore are thrice welcome, for according to those personages the last few weeks have been terribly barren of suggestion as far as gowns and other articles of woman's adornment are concerned.

What does the foreign stage say we must wear? The styles of 1830, not brought down to date, but those of the days of William IV. Big berthas, spread out petticoats, bell-out sleeves, coal-scuttle bonnets and a lot of other hyphenated garments that will make us look like our grand dames rejuvenated. No matter whether we are short or long, broad or narrow, our skirts must have as many frills upon them as they can possibly find room for, and as for our shoulders, well, the less we have of these members the better off we are from a standpoint of fashion, and the more room we have for the huge-puffed, drooping-at-the top, crinolined and epauletted arrangements intended to encase our arms.

Even our hair we are not to be permitted to arrange as becomes the contour of our faces; its modes are laid down for us in ringlets, puffs, waves, corkscrews and perhaps the graceful waterfall may be added to the list.



HARRIET VERNON.

It certainly seems not at all unlikely that prunella gaiters, too, may follow in its train. But as this is the age of realism, do not let us half do things. If we are to be decked out like belles of the early Victorian days or thereabouts, by all means let us be very faithful in our way of doing it, and not be contented with pelisses and hoopskirts.

Let us have fears and drop curtain veils and crewel work and other relics of the sentimental part of this century as well.

Harriet Vernon

On the road to health — the consumptive who reasons and thinks. Consumption is developed through the blood. It's a scrofulous affection of the lungs—a blood-taint. Find a perfect remedy for scrofula, in all its forms—something that purifies the blood, as well as clears it. That, if it's taken in time, will cure Consumption.

Dr. Pierce has found it. It's his "Golden Medical Discovery." As a strength-restorer, blood-cleanser, and flesh-builder, nothing like it is known to medical science. For every form of Scrofula, Bronchial, Throat, and Lung affections, Weak Lungs, Severe Coughs, and kindred ailments, it's the only remedy so sure that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

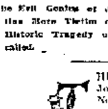
"You get well, or you get $500." That's what is promised, in good faith, by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, to sufferers from Catarrh. The worst cases, no matter of how long standing, are permanently cured by this Remedy.

A TALE OF LONG AGO

REVIVED BY THE SUIT OF JOSIE MANSFIELD.

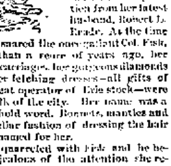
A LONG CAREER OF BRILLIANT NOTORIETY.

The Evil Genius of Jim Fisk Counts One More Victim of Her Wiles—An Historic Tragedy of New York Recalled.



THE ONCE FAIR Josie Mansfield, the New York Cleopatra who held sway twenty years ago, has emerged after a long period of comparative obscurity in a suit for separation from her latest husband, Robert L. Reade. At the time she ensnared the once gallant Col. Fisk, more than a score of years ago, her smart carriages, her gorgeous diamonds and her fetching dresses—all gifts of the great operator of Erie stock—were the talk of the city. Her name was a household word. Bonnets, mantles and a peculiar fashion of dressing the hair were named for her.

She quarreled with Fisk and he became jealous of the attention she received from Stokes. After long bickerings, threats were made that all the letters and telegrams Fisk had sent her would be published. The great speculator obtained an injunction preventing Stokes from making these papers public. The shooting of Fisk followed soon afterward.



JOSIE MANSFIELD.

Josie Mansfield sued Col. Fisk's widow for $200,000, claiming that the colonel had owed her that amount. She lost this suit and then went to live in Boston. She found the hub a most uncomfortable residence, as crowds followed her and hooted at her in the streets. She fled to Paris, where she has since remarried.

Her first husband was Frank Lawlor, an actor of some note. She was in San Francisco at the time of her marriage to him. Her maiden name was Warren. Lawlor, after the Fisk shooting, declared that he had married her to protect her from her parents, who had tried to blackmail a man named Perley through her. She and Lawlor lived together until 1866. She met Fisk in 1870, and requested an introduction. Lawlor died some years ago.

Her second husband belongs to an excellent family. His father, Robert Reade, was very wealthy, having been one of the first and most extensive property-owners in Minneapolis. Robert Reade sold most of his American possessions in 1876 and went to France with his wife and two daughters. He was drowned while bathing about nine years later.

Robert L. Reade practiced law in New York for some years. He enjoyed a large income and he devoted more of his time to merry company than to legal work. He met Josie Mansfield in the summer of 1891. She was still a belle, although no longer young and she had many admirers. She called herself Mrs. Lawlor. He was fascinated by her and urged her to marry him immediately. She was coy and told him to take ample time and to consider well the step he proposed taking. He returned to New York and considered, and his desire to marry in no way abated. He gave a dinner to some friends in September, 1891, and when the liqueurs were served made this announcement: "I am going to marry Josie Mansfield if she'll let me. I think she has been more sinned against than sinning. She is the only person who can save me from drinking myself to death, as I am now doing. You all know how I've lived."

His chums then drank to his fiancée's health.

He told other friends a few days afterward that he was going to England to visit his brother-in-law, Lord Falkland, at his country seat, Skutterskelfe, in Yorkshire. The next news was that he had married Mrs. Lawlor in St. George's church, Hanover square, London.

Mr. Reade's mother is a cousin of Mrs. Levi P. Morton. His oldest sister was married to George Francis Strachan, governor of the Bermudas. Captain Byron Cary, aid-de-camp to Gen. Strachan, and who subsequently succeeded to the title of Viscount Falkland, married his second sister.

Kidnapers Locked Up.

Charles Compton, Marion Whitman and John Parker, the latter colored, are in jail at New Albany, Ind., for the attempt to kidnap the daughter of J. H. Kraft. Those with the dead Stephen Whitman composed the gang. Compton made a confession, confirming the reports. He says the conspiracy was hatched six months ago and that Marion Whitman was the ringleader. The latter bears a hard name. He deserted his wife and then assaulted her sister, who afterward committed suicide. The feeling is very strong against the prisoners, but they will be given a fair trial.

THE RING.

Boxing has taken a new lease of life in Boston, and there is a prospect of very lively sport during the coming winter.

Peter Maher and Joe McAuliffe had a four-round go at San Francisco last week. It was very tame and was declared a draw.

Jack Dempsey has signed a contract with a theatrical manager, by which he plays a small part in a play, and boxes with his trainer nightly.

Billy Vernon, the Haverstraw brickmaker, knocked Jack Aikens of New York out in two rounds at Brooklyn recently.

Joe Walcott has been matched to fight Harry Tracey at 133 pounds for a $1,000 purse before the Camden Street club, Boston, on Nov. 20.

This year was a bad one for baseball phenomenons. In football it is worse; there are none. Rhodes, R. A. Poes, Traffords and the like are scarcer than mugwumps at a Tammany convention.

TWO ODD INCIDENTS.

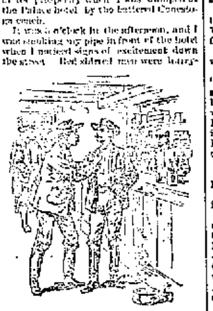
TRAGIC AND HUMOROUS HAPPENINGS AS SKETCHED FROM LIFE.

How the City Marshal of Brown's Hole Captured an Armed Desperado Without Drawing a Weapon—The Midnight Lynching—The Wrong Man.

[Copyright, 1893, by American Press Association.]

Brown's Hole was a mushroom mining camp and a noted place in its palmy days away back in the fifties, although where it once stood are now to be seen but a few rotting timbers, and sage brush grows in the streets, through which the lone wolf may prowl unmolested. The placers were about exhausted when new diggings to the south brought about a rush that swept the town clean of every man who could get away, but Brown's Hole was in the flush of its prosperity when I was dumped at the Palace hotel by the battered Concord coach.

It was 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and I was smoking my pipe in front of the hotel when I noticed signs of excitement down the street. Red shirted men were hurrying toward a certain point, and I was thinking of investigating when the proprietor of the hotel came out and said:



HE TOOK THE COCKED REVOLVER.

"Wanter come down to Red Mike's saloon and see the fun, stranger?"

"What's up?" I asked.

"Jack Larmer's in town, and the marshal's goin to take him for hoss stealin. Larmer's a dead one, an I reckon that'll be shootin."

I was only too glad of the opportunity to witness the capture of a genuine mountain desperado, and so I went along with the hotel keeper. We proceeded straight to the saloon, where quite a crowd had collected, although the most of them remained outside, evidently thinking it safer there. My companion entered, and I followed him.

Jack Larmer was leaning on the bar, his right hand resting on his hip, close to the butt of a revolver, while his face was turned toward the door. His position showed he expected trouble and was ready for it. He was a tall, rawboned man, with a cool black mustache and a restless eye. He wore rough woolen clothes and heavy high heeled boots, the legs of which came to the knees. Pushed far back on his head was a wide brimmed hat, the band of which was thrust full of cartridges.

This famous desperado was talking with the barkeeper and drinking whisky, apparently quite at his ease, if one did not judge by his flickering eyes. His language was fairly good, and there was very little of the swagger of a ruffian and man killer about him, which disappointed me somewhat.

Bill Hayes, the city marshal, had not yet appeared, but a man told Owen, the hotel keeper, that he was expected any minute. In about 10 minutes the door opened, and he walked in, his hands empty and at his sides, while I could not see a weapon anywhere about his person. He was as large as Larmer, and I noted the two men resembled each other somewhat.

The moment Hayes appeared Larmer had him "covered" with a cocked revolver, but instead of showing any signs of alarm the marshal said:

"Howdy, Jack?"

"Howdy, Bill! Wuz yer lookin fer me?"

"Well, yes, I reckon. Heard ye wuz in town."

"Had to come round and see how things wuz goin along. Thought you'd like to see me."

"I told ye I'd have to take ye if you showed up hyar, Jack."

"That's what you did, Bill, but I've got the drop. Whar's your gun?"

"I didn't 'low I'd need any."

"Well, you will if you take Jack Larmer."

"Now, I don't reckon you'll make a fool of yerself, Jack. Thar ain't no reason why you an I should shoot each other. If I'd wanted to, I could waited outside an bored ye soon as you showed your nose, but I don't do business that thar way. Dan Larry says you stole his hoss, and you say ye didn't. Dan has sworn out a warrant for ye, and I've got it to serve. If you're half as sensible as I reckon, you'll put up yer iron an come along with me."

Larmer laughed and showed his teeth under his black mustache.

"I'm not half the fool you take me for, Bill. What kind of a show would I get if I let you take me?"

"The boys have promised to give ye a fa'r an squar' trial."

"I'd never get it. No, Bill, ye can't take me today."

"But I've got to, Jack. I ain't armed, an of course you kin shoot me if ye want to, but I'm goin to do my duty, shoot or not."

With that, he walked straight up to the horse thief and desperado and took the cocked revolver out of his hand. Larmer seemed dazed by the gall of the act, and he did not shoot or offer any resistance. When he was disarmed and in the custody of the marshal, he said:

"I'm a fool, Bill, but I couldn't shoot when you didn't have any gun in your hand. You'd never took me alive any other way."

"I knowed it," was the marshal's reply.

Larmer was taken to the jail, and he went along quietly enough. A big mob gathered and followed after him, howling and flourishing their weapons now that there was no danger, making me think of a pack of curs snapping at the heels of a wounded grizzly. Larmer did not pay any more attention to them than he would to so many children. As he walked along, arm in arm with the marshal, he chatted and laughed in a free and easy manner, apparently not much disturbed by his capture.

"They'll lynch him tonight sure," asserted Owen. "He mighter know it, but he don't seem to worry."

Sure enough, in the dead hours of the night, I heard a great commotion in town. There were yells and pistol shots, and from an upper window of the hotel I saw a band of men rush along the street with a helpless captive in their midst. They disappeared down the trail to the south, where just before we entered the town I had observed a tree with wide spreading branches, from one of which dangled the frayed end of a rope. Ten minutes later there was a perfect fusillade of shots, a chorus of fiendish yells, then all was still again.

"Poor devil!" I muttered as I crept, shivering, back to my miserable bed.

But a sensation awaited the town, for when a committee went out in the morning to cut down Jack Larmer's body they found, instead of the horse thief, Bill Hayes, the marshal, dangling from the rope. It was some time before they could understand it was Hayes they had lynched, but such was the actual truth, and Jack Larmer was alive and free!

To this day the mystery of that night has never been solved, for it was said Hayes might have saved himself with a word, but he remained silent. Why he set Larmer free and took his place and how he accomplished the trick is a portion of the unsolved mystery.

It is not strange the mob failed to recognize Hayes in the darkness so long as the man kept silent, for he strongly resembled the desperado he had arrested. I have sometimes thought they were relatives, possibly brothers, and that Hayes did not know it until he had placed Larmer under arrest. Having discovered the truth, he may have set the outlaw free and taken his place, even though he knew such an act would cost him his reputation and honor. Perhaps he felt the disgrace so keenly he resolved to remain silent and give up his life in the place of the man he had liberated.

This, however, is all pure speculation.

Jack Larmer was shot in Arizona in 1869. He never explained his escape from the lynchers at Brown's Hole.

He Was Cute.

I was at the Grand Central station in New York to meet a friend when I noticed a typical hayseeder who was wandering about as if looking for someone. He was carrying a battered leather bag gripped tightly in his right hand, and "Reub" was written all over him so plainly that no one could make a mistake as to the section of the country from which he had come. Catching my eye, he beckoned me aside mysteriously, at the same time looking craftily around to see if he was observed by others.

"My name's Eben Flanders," he volunteered in a confidential tone, "an I'm from Vermont. Now, would you cal'late I was from the country jest to look at me?"

I assured him I would not dream such was the case.

"I knowed it," he grinned delightedly. "My old woman said folks'd spot me as soon as I showed my nose in New York, but I tole her she didn't know what she was talkin about. I'm mighty cute when I'm mind ter be, an I jest got myself up in this air rig so kun disown. Do you know a feller in New York by the name of Frank Small?"

I did not know Mr. Small.

"Well, I didn't know but yo might. I know ev'rybody 'round our town."

"New York city is pretty large. Is Mr. Small a friend of yours?"

He hesitated, caressing the fringe of corn colored whiskers under his chin, and then he answered: "Not exactly. You see him an me is havin a little business deal—that is, we're goin to have." As he said this, he glanced hastily toward his bag, to which he clung with a convulsive grip. All at once I fancied I understood the situation.

"I trust you are not contemplating doing business with a green goods man, Mr. Flanders?" I said.

In a moment he drew himself up stiffly.

"I know what I'm doin, by gorry! They can't no green goods man or bunko steerer git ahead of Eben Flanders. I'm cute. I read the papers." Then he lowered his voice to add, "I kerry a pistol."

I could not refrain from smiling, at which he seemed offended and left me. Five minutes later, just as the train for which I was waiting was announced, I saw Mr. Flanders walking away in the company of a black mustached young man, who wore a polished silk hat and a red necktie.

About three hours later, I came upon the man from Vermont at the corner of the Bowery and Grand street. He had a new leather grip in his hand and was hurrying along when he saw me and stopped short, grinning triumphantly.

"Told yo I was cute!" he exclaimed, flourishing the bag. "Oh, they've gotter git up before sunrise when they git ahead of yer Uncle Eben! Now, what you s'pose I've got in this air bag?"

I told him I had not the least idea.

"Jest come into this ere saloon, an I'll show ye. They ain't all fools that's raised in the country."

He pulled me into the saloon, and we sat down at a round table in the corner. The man from Vermont ordered beer, and when it was before us he said:

"I knowed they meant to beat me all the time, but I cal'lated I was cute enough for 'em. Yass, I've bin gittin green goods letters for a year now, an I never dared tackle them fellers till I read in the papers how a feller from out west beat 'em over here an beat them out of their eyeteeth. Then I scrabbled up $300, loaded my pistol and kem down to try my luck. Had all my money in that old bag, an I met this air Frank Small by app'intment. He tuck me down here somewhere to a place, an then another feller brung out this bag. They opened it an showed me it was full of good money. I was right onter their game, by smoke! an I kept my eye on this bag so they couldn't change it. They said I might have all there was in the bag for my $300, and I jest traded on the spot. Then when they tried to git me to look round so they could swap I up an grabbed the bag, p'inted my pistol at 'em an backed out of the room. It was a square trade, an I left my bag with the $300. I'll bet them sharpers is the two maddest men in New York."

"Are you sure you got away with their good money?" I asked, deeply interested, for I sincerely hoped he had succeeded.

"Sartin," he chuckled as he unfastened the clasps of the bag. "Oh, I'm a cute! Look here!"

But when the bag was opened he found it contained some packages of brown paper. Wildly he clawed them out upon the table and tore them open, but he found only one package with the two sides of a "split" $5 bill pasted on the top and bottom. For about two minutes he sat there stunned, his face pale and his hands trembling. Then he cleared his throat and huskily observed:

"Mister, I'm swindled fair and square! I dunno how they done it, but I do know I hain't anywhere nigh as cute as I took myself to be. It's a good thing I bought a return ticket! I'm goin back home an stick to tradin hosses. This air town is too quick for me!"

Women prayed and men cursed.

The storm howled and beat against the vessel's staunch ribs.

A white robed figure clung to the aftersail and peered into the darkness.

"She is gone!"

The figure swayed in the tempest.

"No, she rises."

A great wave swept over the deck. The figure was kneeling now.

"She has sunk thrice. Is it a dream? After all these years to be alone at last!"

After a time the figure crept forward and reported the loss of a chaperon.—Detroit News-Tribune.

THE NEW YORK

WEEKLY HERALD

FOR 1894

WILL BE WITHOUT QUESTION AMERICA'S

LEADING FAMILY PAPER

The reputation that the WEEKLY HERALD has enjoyed for many years of being the best home newspaper in the land will be materially added to during the year of 1894. No pains or expense will be spared to make it in every department the most reliable, interesting and instructive of all weekly newspaper publications.

It will be improved in many ways.

A number of new features and departments will be added. The latest development in all fields of contemporaneous human interest will be ably discussed from week to week by accomplished writers.

THE NEWS OF THE WORLD

will be given in a concise but complete form. Every important or interesting event, either at home or abroad, will be duly described in the columns of the WEEKLY HERALD.

In politics the HERALD is absolutely independent and sound. It tells the rights and wrongs of all sides without fear.

Farmers and stock raisers cannot afford to be without the WEEKLY HERALD during the coming year. It will contain a regular department each week devoted exclusively to subjects of timely interest to them, and giving many valuable suggestions and new ideas.

The women and children of the land will find in the WEEKLY HERALD a welcome visitor. The household and children's pages will be both instructive and entertaining. They will abound in hints and receipts which women so much value.

A brilliant array of novels and short stories by the best writers in America and England has been secured, so that fiction will be one of the most attractive features in the WEEKLY HERALD during 1894.

In fact, the WEEKLY HERALD will be a magazine of the highest order, combined with a complete newspaper.

RAILROADS AND SHOPS.

The Pennsylvania Drops Its Assistant Trainmasters.

Accidents, Incidents and Personal Mention Gathered About the Various Shops of the City.

The offices of assistant trainmasters on the Pittsburg, at this city and Chicago, have been abolished and the gentlemen who filled them have gone back to their original positions. The office in this city was held by W. E. Davis, who this morning resumed his old position as general yardmaster. Thomas M. Glenn, who was appointed assistant trainmaster at Chicago last April and later station agent protem at the same point, to fill the place of a man who is incapacitated by sickness, is not affected by the order which abolishes the offices. Mr. Glenn, previous to his appointment to his present position, was a passenger conductor running between this city and Chicago.

MINOR MENTION.

Machinist Herman Regel, of the Bass works, is sick and off duty.

Blacksmith Oscar Judy, of the Pittsburg shops, is sick and off duty.

Terrence Martin, the veteran blacksmith, is laid up with lame feet.

Wabash Trainmaster C. F. Sisler, of Peru, was in the city last Saturday.

Blacksmith Rudolph Sitting, of the Bass works, is suffering with the grip.

H. C. C. Noes, a cabinetmaker at the Pittsburg shops, is sick and off duty.

H. C. Loos, of the Kerr Murray factory, will go to Williamsville, Ill., today to put in a gas plant.

Machinist Julius Koch, of the Pittsburg shops, is working again, after an illness of several weeks.

Conductor James Craig, of the Pittsburg road, has returned from the south, much improved in health.

Major Mank, the veteran Pittsburg conductor, is confined to his bed with a severe attack of the grip.

Assistant Ticket Agent Robert Douglas went to Chicago last evening to spend a few days with friends.

J. W. Wachtel, operator in the Wabash telegraph office at Columbia City, was here a few hours last Saturday.

Night Engineer Michael Cairns, who was sick, returned to his duties in the Bass blacksmith shop this morning.

Dr. J. M. Kells spent Sunday in the city. The doctor will remove his family to Columbus, Ohio, next Thursday.

The Bass works shipped a Corliss engine, cylinder 14x30 inches, today to the Lenoir Car company, Lenoir City, Tenn.

John Thompson resumed work in the Bass machine shop this morning. Last Wednesday he was considerably bruised by a fall.

Henry Dryer, Henry Dickmeyer and John Roach, of the Pittsburg shops, are on duty again, having recovered from the grip.

William Block and Charles Rippe, boilermakers at the Bass works, are repairing the boilers at the Organ factory this week.

Lorenzo Armbauty, who was off duty on account of the illness of his wife, reported at the Bass blacksmith shop this morning.

English capitalists have secured the right of way for a railroad from Stockton to Los Angeles, through the San Joaquin valley.

Mrs. William Wolford, wife of the Big Four's shop foreman at Wabash, is lying ill at the family residence, No. 408 Hanna street.

E. J. Hooker, of Defiance, Ohio, formerly night operator in the Wabash freight house in this city, spent Sunday here with his friends.

Blacksmith H. Shives resumed work this morning, after a weeks' absence on account of a painful boil on his arm. He works for the Bass company.

One of the large boilers in the Bass blacksmith shop is being transferred to the boiler and machine power rooms, where its services are now needed.

Wabash engine No. 13, which was hauling train 93, broke down at Roanoke this morning and No. 206 was called to take the train to Toledo.

H. C. Gage, Wabash passenger conductor, who has charge of an accommodation train, Toledo and Defiance, was the guest of his brother, in this city, over Sunday.

Manager J. M. Bassett, of the Standard Wheel works, is detained near home by the serious illness of two of his children, who suffer with acute attacks of the grip.

M. Burger, who resigned a position in the Bass boiler shops some three months ago, was reinstated, commencing work this morning. Mr. Burger had a finger cut off some time ago.

Fred Meyer's friends in the Pittsburg shop will be pleased to learn that he has so far recovered as to be able to leave his bed and sit up. He expects to return to work in a week or two.

This week the five remaining victims of the Wabash accident at Kingsbury will leave the company's hospital at Peru. Miss Hill, Mrs. Rider and Willie Evans, who were the most seriously injured, have been able to walk for over a week.

Pittsburg Boilermaker J. Cleary has gone to Monroeville to attend the funeral of Mrs. Cleary's mother.

Fireman Garretson, of the Chicago and Erie, spent Sunday in the city. Mr. Garretson lives at Huntington.

Herman Mannweiler, the Pittsburg boiler inspector, is off duty on account of the death of his father-in-law, John Backes.

Mr. Marshall, a blacksmith, has moved his family from Delphos, Ohio, to this city and taken a position in the Pittsburg shops.

Hubert Noble, route mail agent, is helping out in the transfer department at the depots during the sickness of one of the regular transfer men.

The new Panhandle yards at Logansport were opened for business this morning. They are situated south of the old yards on the opposite side of the river.

The Kansas railroad commissioners run things to suit themselves. The latest act was to order the Central Branch railway to erect and maintain stock yards at Barnes.

Theodore N. Kuchor resumed his old position in the Pittsburg machine shop this morning. For two weeks he was looking after affairs in the iron machine room, vice Captain Harrison, who was sick.

The late John Backes, whose death is recorded elsewhere, was a member of the Pennsylvania Voluntary Relief association and has drawn a sick benefit for nearly two years. His family will now get $500.

The employes of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad are establishing a railroad branch of the Y. M. C. A. at Pittsburg, Pa. The employes of the Pennsylvania lines already have a flourishing branch of the association in that city.

George Baudall, an employe of the Grand Rapids and Indiana railroad shops, while coupling cars Saturday at Grand Rapids had the misfortune to smash a thumb and two fingers. It will not be necessary to amputate the crushed members.

Engines Nos 94, 197 and 157, passenger, and 218, freight, were turned out of the Pittsburg shops last week and Nos. 21 and 246 were taken in for repairs. There are now fourteen engines undergoing repairs and five awaiting a chance to get in the shops.

J. B. Connors, for thirteen years superintendent of the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan railroad, tendered his resignation last Saturday, the same to take effect January 1. Charles Stein, late with the Lake Shore, will succeed Mr. Connors.

Saturday Joseph W. Shane began a suit in the superior court at Terre Haute to recover 1,500, the full amount of an insurance policy, from the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen. Shane was rendered almost blind by the breaking of a steam pipe and claims full amount of the policy on the ground of total disability.

Isaac Beall, a Muncie gentleman, has filed suit against the Lake Erie and Western road for damages for being put off a train because he hadn't a ticket, the ticket agent, he alleging, refusing to sell him the same. The ticket agent and principal witness is now dead. The case will come up for hearing at the next term of the Blackford county court.

Capt. R. B. Harrison is "on deck" in the Pittsburg shops again, having recovered from a severe attack of the grip. The captain says that the remedy that brought him around all right was hot lemonade taken frequently and powdered borax, the latter used as snuff. This is a simple remedy, but none the less effective, says the captain, and he recommends it to all victims of the grip.

Thomas Sullers, who operates the large planer in the factory of Rhinesmith & Simonson, is laid up from the effects of an accident. Saturday evening a heavy plank fell from a pile of lumber, the sharp edge of the board striking Mr. Suller's foot. The injured member immediately swelled to such proportions that the attending surgeon was not able to decide whether any of the bones were broken.

The Logansport Pharos says that developments are promised shortly that will confirm the report that the Wabash company is to relinquish its hold on the Eel River road, when the western terminus of that line will be where it was in the beginning—at Logansport. The Pharos also states that the Wabash will build a line of its own from Fort Wayne to Butler. The Eel River road will then most likely become a feeder of the Lake Shore.

A gentleman in Scotland has trained a couple of mice, and invented machinery for enabling them to spin yarn. The work is done on the treadmill principle. It is so constructed that the common house mouse is enabled to make atonement to society for past offences by twisting and reeling from 100 to 120 threads a day. To complete it the little pedestrian has to run ten and one-half miles. The journey is performed every day with ease. An ordinary mouse weighs only half an ounce.

Whether new railways are rebuilt or not the wear and tear upon the more than 170,000 miles of railway in the United States calls for a large amount of new rails every year. Those conversant with this fact will not be surprised to read that the Pennsylvania railroad has already placed orders for 40,000 tons of new steel rails, to cost one million dollars, for renewals and new track in 1894. The gratifying feature of this order is that it is an assurance that no matter how dull the times may be this progressive corporation purposes to continue the improvement and extension of its system of tracks, thus providing greater facilities for the transaction of its increasing business as well as increased safety and comfort for its many patrons. If all our trunk lines were as progressive there would be plenty of orders for the manufacture of new steel rails not only in 1894, but every year.

FUNERAL OF JOHN BACKES

The funeral of the late John Backes, whose death was mentioned in Saturday's SENTINEL, will take place at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning from the house, No. 30 East Third street, and a half hour later from St. Paul's Catholic church.

John Backes was born in Germany January 11, 1826. He came to America along in the '50s and in 1853 entered the service of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railway company as an apprentice in the boiler shop. He served his apprenticeship and was given a position as journeyman boilermaker, which he filled up to May, 1892, when he was taken ill. Since that date he has been ill continually, a part of the time being so low that his life was despaired of on several occasions. He was a most excellent man and was greatly beloved by his shopmates and acquaintances generally. Mrs. Backes died in 1875 and since her demise the deceased lived with his children at the old homestead. William Backes, the boilermaker, who died in Cleveland a few weeks ago, was a son of John Backes, and the shock of the news of his death probably hastened the death of the father. Other children now living are Matthias Backes, of Wellsville, Ohio; Jacob Backes and Mrs. Francis Laly, of this city.

A Cure for Croup.

When on a visit to Iowa, Mr. R. Dalton, of Luray, Russell County, Kansas, called at the laboratory of Chamberlain & Co., Des Moines, to show them his six-year-old boy, whose life had been saved by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, it having cured him of a very severe attack of croup. Mr. Dalton is certain that it saved his boy's life and is enthusiastic in his praise of the Remedy. For sale by druggists.

Out in a Blizzard.

Mr. J. P. Blaize, an extensive real estate dealer in Des Moines, Iowa, narrowly escaped one of the severest attacks of pneumonia while in the northern part of that state during a recent blizzard, says the Saturday Review. Mr. Blaize had occasion to drive several miles during the storm and was so thoroughly chilled that he was unable to get warm, and inside of an hour after his return he was threatened with a severe attack of pneumonia or lung fever. Mr. Blaize sent to the nearest drug store and got a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, of which he had often heard, and took a number of large doses. He says the effect was wonderful and in a short time he was breathing quite easily. He kept on taking the medicine and the next day was able to come to Des Moines. Mr. Blaize regards his cure as simply wonderful. For sale by druggists.

GAME OF TEN PINS.

IT IS NOW THE POPULAR WINTER SPORT.

Some Points About a Game Which is Becoming More Popular in America Every Year—Illustrations Showing Positions.

HAVING PUT aside the implements of summer and autumn pastime, many sportsmen will now turn their attention to bowling. Unlike its other winter contemporaries, skating, tobogganing, curling and iceboating, bowling does not depend upon the elements to permit of its enjoyment by its patrons, but simply on the recurrence of the season. During that interval the clashing of the pins, the swift grating of the ball as it goes spinning down the alley, send forth echoes which to the initiated are almost as familiar as the sleigh bells in the parks, and to be heard at almost every turn.

In olden times the game of nine pins was played on the grass on Bowling Green. In this form it was brought from the Faderland, but the present game is purely an American institution. The American game of ten pins came into existence early in the sixties.

The first open tournament, and the pioneer, was the Union, which was afterward followed by that of the Golden Cup, the Pomeroy, and in 1890 by the organization of the American Amateur Bowling Union of the United States, which claims full jurisdiction over the game, and brings the sport up to the commencement of its present popularity. For the past three years its advancement has been one continuous succession of leaps.

There are two purely bowling organizations that stand prominently first in the public estimation—the Phoenix and the Spartans. The Phoenix are the present holders of the American Amateur Bowling union's championship, and Capt. H. W. Copperthwait, who has probably the highest average for the games played during the past five years in tournaments—199—has a style of delivery which is generally conceded to combine the best interpretation of the game.

The pictures accompanying this article illustrate the best positions.

The hand which grips the ball is turned palm outward, thus avoiding the necessity of an outward twist of the arm previous to casting, which, as shown in the second illustration, a straight ball from the side or the center of the alley is played.

If a curved or twisted ball is bowled, the hand of delivery is left as in Fig. 3, with the back of the hand to the front, but which at the time the arm is swinging is turned, the hand being turned at the last moment in order to get the twist or curve.

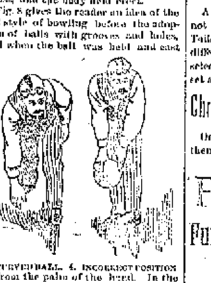
A bowler usually takes a run before casting of from five to ten feet; it is therefore necessary that the feet should be in a good position for a quick start. Should they be in the position as shown in the fourth illustration, it necessitates a step to the rear, which in turn frequently changes the gauge of the ball. A good bowler is very careful about a variation in his position, and tries to hold the ball both in the run and swing of the arm as nearly plumb with the line sighted as possible.

The body being bent, gives momentum as it straightens up to the ball when it is lowered to the side and the swing begun. It is in the swing that the force required for the casting is obtained. After the gauge has been fixed, the body is raised until the arm is at full length, the ball starting at a gentle swing, meanwhile gathering speed, at each movement until the force required is secured, then with a short run the body is bent slightly at the hips and knees, the ball brought down to a level with the alley and cast instantly, thus preventing lofting or bounding.

The arm while in reaction should never describe more than a quarter circle, and never reach a point higher than a line parallel with the shoulder. The incorrect pose is given in illustration 4. Notwithstanding the fact that other positions are exceedingly ungraceful, many expert bowlers adopt the style, and their scores do not seem to be greatly affected.

The seventh illustration gives another correct position; the same general principles apply to this style as to Fig. 1, the only difference being that the ball is held in the center of the body at the chest instead of at the waist, and the body held erect.

Fig. 8 gives the reader an idea of the old style of bowling before the adoption of balls with grooves and holes, and when the ball was held and cast in from the palm of the hand. In the casting a great deal depends upon the proper moment to let go and the pose of the body when the ball leaves the hand, as in shot and hammer contests; the retraction at the time of release is frequently followed by placing the player in very awkward situations. Besides, an improper cast means either a lofted or gutter ball, i. e., one that bounces upon the alley, or one which goes off to one side before reaching its destination, either of which is detrimental to the player's chances with the pins.



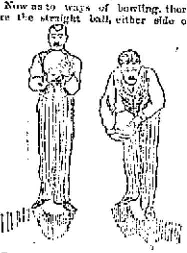
3. CURVED BALL. 4. INCORRECT POSITION

As in baseball, a bowler can give a curve or twist to a ball cast after having gained mastery over it. The knack of giving a double impulse to a ball while on its way down the alley, a forward and axial one, known as "twisters," is a personal secret with bowlers.

Speed is one of the necessary requisites for a twisting or spinning ball; unless speed is given to the ball, the secondary action or the revolving upon its axis will throw the ball off its regular course. A twist is obtained in two ways—first, simply by a sudden and sharp inward movement of the wrist; and second, from both the fingers and wrist.

A twisted ball is probably the most destructive of all possible shots when properly played. A curve is placed upon a ball in much the same way as a pitcher would execute it, by means of the elevation or lowering of the fingers; some require the trick by a simple movement of the wrist.

Now as to ways of bowling, there are the straight ball, either side of center, the out or in curved ball, the twisted ball, and the crossalley ball. The crossalley ball is often used in picking off single pins, or in attempts at difficult scores. The twister is generally the first or strike ball, when the player tries for all the pins.



7. CORRECT POSITION. 8. OLD STYLE.

The straight, the curved and crossalley balls are also frequently played as a strike ball, and with fairly good success. A ball rolled at a moderate rate of speed is usually the most destructive, for a high rate will often cause it to cut through the pins, leaving some standing in very difficult places, while a slow ball will not have force enough to do good work, and is productive of very nearly the same results.

Nothing is so Acceptable as a Christmas Gift to Husband, Wife, Brother, Sister or Friend as Some Useful Article of

FURNITURE

Foster's is the place to buy. Why? Their stock is all new, their assortment the largest, their goods the best made, their prices the lowest. Four pretty good reasons are they not?

There is also a style and a finish about the goods purchased of us not found in those purchased elsewhere.

We have no ambition to have our store regarded as excelling in the work of gathering together all the shoddy, trashy Furniture that can be raked up from the poor houses and penitentiaries of the land, merely for the sake of making a low price. Stuff of that kind you ought to be paid for carrying home. If you are determined to buy it, we would rather you would purchase it elsewhere.

But we do have an ambition to have our establishment regarded as headquarters for good goods, sold at a less price than by any other house in the state. If the article purchased is a wood seat kitchen chair or a $2 bedstead. We want you to find it just as carefully and well made as though it was a turkish rocker or a $200 bedroom suit.

HAS GOT AN INTEREST NOW.

"Two commercial tourists of the pine board persuasion met in the Union depot the other day," says a writer.

"'Hello Charley,' says No. 1, 'I haven't seen you in an age. What are you doing now?'

"'Oh, I'm in the same old line,' responds No. 2.

"'With the same house?'

"'Yes, same old concern, but situated a little differently.'

"'How is that?'

"'Well, I've got an interest now.'

"'Is that so? How long since?'

"'Since the first of the month.'

"'Let me congratulate you.'

"'Yes, the old man told me I'd got to take an interest in the business or quit, so I took the interest.'"

That's What Our Readers Have Done.

They have taken an interest in our proposition to furnish them a magnificent series of photographic views of famous scenes throughout the world, but it was not forced upon them. They have done it as a matter of choice. They realized that "The Sentinel" was offering them a splendid opportunity, and one that in all probability would not pass their way again, and that have not needed coercion as the "pine board tourist" did to stir them to action.

The boss barbers have cut their men down from $12 to $10 per week. The employes, however, get a certain per cent of the earnings, which is applied on their salaries. The two dollar cut is made on account of hard times.

Victor Burns, a young man living at the corner of Clay and Madison streets, was accidentally shot in the leg by a young companion while hunting, Saturday. The lad was not seriously hurt. Dr. Bud Von Sweringen extracted the ball.

William Thompson, a hostler, employed at the Reit feed barn on Harrison street, was painfully injured yesterday by being kicked by a horse. The bones of his right hand were fractured and the flesh lacerated. Dr. Porter took a dozen stitches in the wounds.

The coming romantic actor, Robert Mantell, will present "Monbars" at the Temple Wednesday evening. Mr. Mantell is well fitted by physique for the portrayal of such a character as "Monbars." It is very hard to tell where the chief charm of Mantell's acting lies, but certain it is that few actors on the stage today have so strong a hold on public favor as does he. Mr. Mantell has a large and strong company with him, and they are a most worthy adjunct to the successful production of the drama. Miss Charlotte Behrens, the leading lady, is a most charming and winning actress.

The character of the church music in public services was very ably and interestingly discussed in a sermon at the Congregational church last evening by Rev. J. S. Ainslie. He thought that one of the most important features of religious services was the singing, and that there was as much worship in it as there was in praying and in preaching. He believed in congregational singing and the people should do more of it than they do. Church choirs should not be permitted to do all the song worship. Every member of the congregation should take a part and help to swell the praises of the Lord. He spoke of many of the features of church music and threw out several good suggestions as to the best plans to be pursued in increasing congregational singing.

M. C. Fitzsimons, of Logansport, was in the city over Saturday and Sunday.

Dr. M. F. Meyer was called to Bluffton yesterday to perform a difficult operation.

GETTING TO WORK.

Citizens' Relief Committee Hold an Important Meeting.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the central auxiliary committee of the citizens' relief society, held this morning in the city hall, organization was effected by electing S. M. Foster, chairman; E. A. K. Hackett, secretary, and John I. White, treasurer. Superintendent Johnson, of the feeble minded institution, was present and gave valuable advice to the committee. Mr. Johnson had charge of the poor of the city of St. Louis during the time of the great flood and also for several years at Chicago. The executive committee decided to do all its work through the different relief societies of the city and will start in the morning to make a thorough canvass of the city for funds.

Among the thousands of exhibits at the World's Fair in Chicago none were more interesting (to us) than the Bakers' and Confectioners' Tools and Utensils exhibited by the great W. B. Johnston Co. of London, England, chief among which was an oven with complete fixtures for Steam Bread Baking. This new system of steam baking is one of the best additions known to the baker's trade, which we have adopted and just completed. It is a well known fact that bread baked with natural gas becomes dried before it is taken from the oven. By our new system of steam baking we can now supply our customers with a sweet loaf of bread of delicious flavor and which will keep moist for a number of days. To be had only at the Chicago Bakery, largest Bread and Fancy Cake Bakery in Northern Indiana.
